Charming

Isn’t it charming
how crows always know
that worms will plump
in the rain,
come to the surface
and go down whole,
without a pinch of pain?

Departure can be
pleasant (pleasant
as death can be)
to know that leaves
will always fall
and clouds will cry
in spring.